

The Same Love Song

Tamar Hadar

The first time I held you, my new child, I looked at your precious being.
My love for you was endless, and my soul began to sing.
Your birth brings blessing and much G-dliness into the world today.
I peer into your sweet eyes, and faintly hear what they say...

*It was a long journey coming from heaven, down to your womb.
I yearned to stay above; your world wreaked darkness and gloom.
But G-d urged me to go on; He was sure it was my time.
He said my soul would enhance the world and make it more divine.*

*I said, "G-d, My perfect soul will be tainted by evil down there."
He answered, "You are an actual part of Me and forever pure."
My heart was heavy to leave; G-d showered me with His love so strong,
But now, Mother, I see it in your eyes; you play the same love song.*

*The song is full of guidance, care and love; my soul will be nourished.
It has harmony with faith and strength, and I see my soul will flourish.
How, I ask, did you acquire that deep love I saw in G-d, now in your eyes,
One that makes me feel safe and happy and comforts my newborn cries.*

*Your soul must have been on a journey similar to mine,
I can tell your soul is G-dly because your eyes have that special shine.
They speak of that love so beautiful that G-d showered on me above,
I am comforted by you, Mother, you sing me that same song of love.*

I take in all your tiny eyes have told me and imprint it inside my heart.
I send a prayer up to G-d, that I can fulfill His will and do my part.
G-d, you have entrusted to me this baby, a pure and holy soul.
Help me raise him with your love song, so it sounds just as beautiful.
